

KIDNEY COMMUNITY Issue 5

From The National Events Manager...

You will notice that the Kidney Community Newsletter keeps getting longer in length! This is due to all the wonderful community stories that keep pouring into our offices — and with May being the month of Red Undies Week, we were inundated with accounts of creative activities happening across the country. This year's campaign proved to be our most popular, with more people participating in awareness-raising activities than ever before. Doctors, nurses, consumers and members of the general public donned their red undies to expose kidney disease for the silent killer it is. For the first time, kidney disease was front and centre in the media, with stories running in major metropolitan and regional newspapers, and also on television. An appearance on the Morning Show by Kidney Health Australia spokesman and Amazing Race Competitor Tyler Atkins (himself a kidney disease sufferer) was especially popular. A huge thank you to all those who made this week possible and please visit our website www.kidney.org.au for more great highlights.

Ladies Lunch for Support

The NSW Central Coast Kidney Health Australia Support Group has been raising money and garnering support for Kidney Health Australia's NSW Kids Programs for 15 years. Over the past 5 years alone, they have raised a massive $40,000 through their many luncheons, golf days, fashion parades and other exciting events. This group of 20 vivacious women held a Kidney Health Week lunch on May 23rd at the Gosford Gold Club which was attended by over 100 people. The day raised over $2000 for Kidney Kids. Thanks ever so much to this lovely group of women who work very hard to raise the funds needed to deliver our Kids Capers programs in particular.

Medical Matters... Latest Publications

In recent months, a number of important pieces of Australian research have been published - each offering valuable insight into various aspects of the renal world. In April, a paper entitled How Australian nephrologists view home dialysis: Results of a National Survey was published in the journal Nephrology. This study of Australian nephrologist attitudes to home dialysis therapies provides an in-depth view of the issues in Australia affecting the uptake of these treatments. In particular, it finds differences between Australia and other jurisdictions that have published in the area of home therapies. This study will help to provide a basis for further research and help support efforts to increase home therapy utilization in Australia. Copies can be requested by contacting Kidney Health Australia.

In addition to this, a survey of Australian nurse's views regarding home dialysis was also published in the Renal Society of Australasia Journal. This survey identified support amongst Australian nephrology nurses for the expansion of home dialysis across Australia, and highlighted barriers to accessing these therapies. Copies can be accessed on-line at <http://www.renalsociety.org/RSAJ/journal/mar11/Lauder.pdf>

The Australian Bureau of Statistics also released Cause of Death data for 2009 (which is the most recent data), showing that diseases of the kidney and urinary system are now the 9th leading cause of death in Australia. The data also revealed that in 2009, 3312 people lost their life to kidney and urinary disease. This was more than breast cancer (2,799), prostate cancer (3,111) or even road deaths (1,417). The report can be accessed on-line at <http://www.abs.gov.au/ausstats/abs@.nsf/mf/3303.0>

Kidneys Get Some Decent Exposure

Kidney disease was front and centre in May, as Red Undies Week kicked off in style across the nation. This year's signature campaign saw consumers, nurses, doctors and even celebrities showing off their underwear in order to give kidney disease some decent exposure. Kidney Health Australia Ambassador Tyler Atkins made a lasting impression on viewers of the popular Morning Show, donning his red underwear on national television and talking about his own battles with kidney disease. Appearing on campaign postcards and posters, Tyler had been a great supporter of Kidney Health Australia and we look forward to following him on Australia's Amazing Race this season. For more information about Red Undies Week and to check out all the action from this year's campaign, check out www.redundiesweek.org.au

Armadale's Super Screen

For five days during Red Undies Week, the Armadale Health Centre WA hosted an innovative kidney screening program aimed at detecting early kidney disease in the general public. The 5-10 minute on-the-spot screen consisted of height, weight, blood pressure, blood sugar, urine and BMI measurements. An unbelievable 737 people were screened, with many having out-of-normal-range results requiring medical follow-up. A special thanks to Armadale Renal Nurse Practitioner Casey Light who donated her time to the project, ensuring that participants were given the best possible care. An amazing effort Casey!

Donald Puts CKD on the Map!

To mark Kidney Health Week, the East Wimmera Health Service (EWHS), in partnership with Kidney Health Australia, held an important inaugural public health forum on May 26 entitled Are your Kidneys at Risk of Failing? This sell-out event was aimed at raising awareness of CKD, and attracted crowds from Donald, Charlton, St Arnaud, Birchip, Horsham, Ballarat, Bendigo, Nyah and Stuart Mill. Topics included kidney health, heart health, diabetes, early detection and prevention, haemodialysis, and depression and chronic illness. Everyone who attended received a health promotion show bag including info on stopping smoking, exercise, eating healthy food, the Swap It Don't Stop It Campaign and caring for carers. The brilliant speakers included Associate Professor John Richmond (Ballarat consultant general physician who oversaw the establishment of the dialysis service) and Joan Wood, a local grandmother of 12 and great grandmother of 2 who shared her husband's story of being diagnosed with CKD and her story as his carer. Debbie Borden, Dialysis Nurse extraordinaire organised a participant tour of the EWHS Donald Campus Dialysis Unit. We warmly thank Genette Heslop and Debbie Borden for their dedication and enthusiasm which has resulted in a model that will be replicated across the country.

Nurses and Consumers Get a Little Bit Cheeky!

From Burnie to Rockhampton, it was a battle of red undies as renal staff and consumers across metropolitan and regional Australia got a bit cheeky in support of the fight against kidney disease. Redland dialysis unit lived up to its name, with the entire unit draped in red, including staff and patients. Red underwear even hung from the ceiling as they celebrated the unit's 4th anniversary in conjunction with Red Undies Week. In Hervey Bay and Maryborough, blood pressure checks were taken to a whole new level with Nurse Practitioner Leanne Brown donning her red undies while she educated the general public about kidney disease. Leanne and her dedicated volunteers detected a number of very high blood pressures (although we think the red undies might have had something to do with it!). Meanwhile, over in Kingaroy, dialysis nurses raided the local Lowes store to promote kidney health amongst unsuspecting shoppers. Wearing sparkling cowboy hats and dashing red undies, they made sure everyone in their vicinity knew just how important the kidneys were! Rumours were also rife that Rockhampton Renal Health staff, Nambour Dialysis Unit nurses and Eurobodalla Dialysis Unit Staff also got in on the red undies action, ensuring that kidney disease had lots of exposure in May! Well done to all those who took the red undies challenge and helped to make this campaign the most successful yet! Remember to keep sending us those great photos and check back on our website www.kidney.org for more great pictures from across the country!

Swapping It in Eurobodalla

Attendees included President Mr Brad Rossiter, Mr Andrew Constance- Minister for Disabilities and Aging, Mr Steve Williams- President Transplant Australia ACT, Mr Evan Egging- Kidney Health Australia NSW Consumer Council Chairperson and Mr Julian Fitzgerald- ACT Donate Life.

The day not only centred on raising awareness of kidney health but also promoted healthy eating and physical fitness through the Swap It Don't Stop It campaign. For more information about Swap It Don't Stop It, visit www.swapit.gov.au

Painting the Town Red in Adelaide

Armed with oodles of health information, they braved the cold and distributed important preventative literature, urging people to think about their risk and to have a kidney health check. Go South Australia!

Australia's First Big Red Walk

Even a downpour of rain could not deter fifty keen walkers from strutting their stuff along the Brisbane river to raise awareness of Kidney Disease in the first annual Big Red Walk. Through the wonderful partnership of the Princess Alexandra Hospital and Kidney Health Australia, kidney consumers and health professionals joined forces to kick off Kidney Health Week in Queensland on Sunday May 22nd. Dr. Jeannette Young, Queensland's Chief Health Officer, was also present, reminding participants of the need to keep spreading the word about the importance of kidney health. The Big Red Walk was modelled after a similar event held in the US which has grown to include 75,000 participants walking in over 100 locations! Look out for next year's Big Red Walk coming to a city near you!

Special Thanks to our generous sponsors:

Giving Thanks

May not only marked Red Undies Week, but this year it was also a time to recognise organ and tissue donors and their families who make donation possible. A number of Donate Life Services of Thanksgiving were held during May and will continue being held into June- providing the opportunity for donor families and transplant recipients in metropolitan, regional and remote areas to reflect on the gift of life. Kidney Health Australia participated and attended ceremonies in Launceston (pictured), Sydney, Adelaide, Melbourne and Brisbane. On May 21, Bribie Island local business woman Kathy Hopson hosted a wonderful Big Red BBQ, ensuring that a range of community groups and members were involved in raising funds for Kidney Health Australia. The Diabetes Support Group, Heartclub Happy Walkers, local cyclists, the Lions Club, local and state politicians were on hand to make the day a success.
